

March 2008

BC Clean Air Forum, Penticton

Wednesday, March 5

This year, the BC Clean Air Forum will include a special focus on agriculture and air quality. You will hear about how agricultural producers are working with government and community organizations to take practical steps that reduce emissions. Examples include innovative programs to deal with wood and plastic wastes as well as other best practices.

Mark your calendars and book your spot now. Whether you are in local government, a community organization or the private sector, this workshop offers an ideal opportunity to:

- * Learn about leading practices in airshed planning and industry innovation
- * Share successes and challenges in airshed and air quality planning.

Register by March 1.
