Subject: Green Economy Speakers confirmed for Resilient Communities

Dear Angela:

Update—we've now confirmed two great speakers for our green economy workshop: Marc Lee and Matt Horne, who will be joined by Elizabeth Weir, CEO of New Brunswick's Energy Efficiency crown corporation – you are welcome to register either by following the links below, or faxing in your registration (your "snail mail" registration has likely arrived in your in-box by now) There are some serious subsidies if you find yourself funding your registration from your own pocket, especially if you take up the early bird rate.

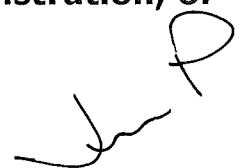

Best,

Charley Beresford

Friday & Saturday March 26 & 27 2010
Harrison Hot Springs

Early bird registration ends on February 26. Click here for online registration, or download a printable form here .

Featured Speakers

Newly Added!

Marc Lee, Senior Economist with the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives in BC

How can we tackle global warming with fairness and equality? That's the focus of the Climate Justice Project, a five-year research partnership with the CCPA, UBC's School of Community and Regional Planning, the Columbia Institute and other community partners. Marc Lee is Co-Director of the Climate Justice Project, and will present at this year's Growing a Green Economy panel about research currently underway.

Newly Added!

Matt Horne, Director of the B.C. Energy Solutions program at the Pembina Institute

Is prosperity compatible with a low-carbon economy? As part of the Growing a Green Economy panel, Matt Horne will present findings from the recent Pembina Institute/David Suzuki Foundation report, Climate Leadership, Economic Prosperity. Matt has worked extensively with the province, municipalities and First Nations on policy change that will reduce greenhouse gas emissions in BC, and has also worked on energy-economy models to estimate the costs and benefits of climate change policy in Canada.
